2 Doors that Hold the Future

Darkness surrounds my being,
Judgment consumed in my enigma,
Wondering what lies around me,
What passage do I take?
Will I have a fate or will I die forever?
Two paths, and a whole new life lies ahead,
Two identical doors glowing before me,
My body shaking from fear,
I shift my right foot forward, beginning to approach the door,
Regretting my decision already,
I tried to comfort myself, but it didn't work,
I begin to talk to my family,
"Mom, Dad, what have I done, help me!"
Listening to my voice, as it echoes into the darkness,
I told myself "you cannot go back now, this is your new life,"
Attempts to warn
Those I love,
Ethereal in mind from above,
Guiding my family into the opposite,
Hoping for a better life for them.
Now I watch them,
Approaching the door,
Turning the knob,
And disappearing like dust.
